

John Howie

Having lived in Lancashire during the 1950s and 1960s I grew up with Leylands! They were the primary marque of nearly all the Municipalities and Company bus companies and the trucks were commonplace for both local businesses and journeys to Liverpool docks. I became familiar with them through regular weekend trips to the 'far corners of the County'. After retiring, I started to research these bus operators' histories and joined the Leyland Society to assist me with this process. I have subsequently written a number of articles for the Society Journal, prepared some Fleet Books for publication and co-ordinate items for Torque magazine.

For a number of years I have been specifically responsible for the Membership Records and ensuring the correct distribution of Society publications as well as providing general support to the rest of the small Committee. I am also a director of The Omnibus Society which proves useful when common problems are experienced.
